The Challenge of Change:

The First 20 Years of Sunshine Coast ElderCollege

Mary Beth Knechtel © 2021

The classroom is packed to the point of standing-room only. The atmosphere is raucous with high-spirited chat in a mixed audience of 55 to 85 year-olds gathered for the bi-annual Preview of courses on offer at the Sunshine Coast ElderCollege in Sechelt, BC. The crowd is eager to meet the line-up of instructors slated to present PowerPoint introductions to their areas of expertise, from “How Rivers Shaped Our Planet” to “An Introduction to iPad” to “Law for Seniors.” The 15 courses listed range from hands-on “Foraging for Mushrooms” and “Design Your Own Garden” to “Festival of the Written Arts” and “Conversation Café” or “Hot Topics,” perennial favourites. When registration opens the following day, some of these classes will sell out within the first half hour and the waiting list to enrol might equal the number of seats available. Such is the popularity of “Guided Autobiography.” The students signing up for this course have the experience of most of a lifetime to record and in this venue they will find a voice and learn how to use it. “Trace Your Ancestors” offers a similar appeal but teaches a different set of research skills for looking back at personal history. Other newer courses like “Restorative Justice” and “Anthropocene” might take longer to fill but enrolment at SC ElderCollege has grown from year to year, proving that for retirees, the learning never ends.

“Conversation Café” at the Sechelt Arts Centre, circa 2013.

Third Age Education has grown as a movement in Europe and North America over the last thirty to forty years. Gerontologists know that physical and mental activities improve quality of life for retired people and that social interaction is essential to their mental well-being. Improved nutrition and health-care in First World countries have resulted in more people living longer lives. We may have loved, or hated, our jobs but eventually retirement time arrives. Almost all of us undergoing this dramatic change of circumstances know the feeling of doubt about whether or not we are making the right decision, voluntary or not. Even if a person is glad to be downing tools for the last time, she or he will wonder if personal identity can survive the loss of job, career, or profession. The plan to sail around the globe in the good ship “Free At Last” may not leave the harbour. Once the dream home on the ocean is built, a couple may look at each other and wonder: Now what? Retirement can be viewed as the career you begin after paid work is over. It is, however, one of the top three stressors we can experience in life, up there with death of a spouse and moving house.

For many decades the Sunshine Coast of British Columbia has been a well-kept secret retirement spot until in recent years the clement climate and the natural beauty of forest bordering on ocean have drawn growing numbers of folks from Vancouver and other parts of BC, Alberta, eastern Canada and even the United States—especially in the time of California forest fires. The hiking trails and kayak tracks see heavy traffic up and down the Coast. The many volunteer organizations well-supplied with conscientious workers prove that retirees have the time and energy to contribute to causes that benefit the whole community or under-served segments of it. The healthy culture of volunteerism in evidence has been both key to the foundation of SC ElderCollege and the guarantee of its success.

Back in the late 1990s, Pat Forst was Continuing Education coordinator for the branch of Capilano College (now Capilano University or CapU, 2008) located in Sechelt. She brought the ‘lifelong learning’ concept of third age education to a four person steering committee made up of Margaret and Brian Shaw and Dick and Irene Harrison. Together they designed a four course program delivered in Fall of 2000 on the local Capilano College campus to 77 students. By Spring 2001, the board numbered 11 and seven courses made up the program for 134 students aged 55 plus. (See Appendix One & Two for lists of Board Chairs, Board Members and Program Committees.) Today, in 2020, 15 courses per term attract almost 1000 students annually. (See Appendix Three for lists of Courses and Instructors.)

The success of the ElderCollege enterprise has depended on the generous volunteerism of instructors with the skills and expertise to teach a broad spectrum of subjects to a public eager for self-improvement. Many of the volunteers who teach or assist as facilitators come from a background of university teaching such as Ron Kydd (courses on health care and travel) or public education like David Ible (facilitator for computer literacy); you might say teaching is in their blood. Others are retired professionals like Doctor Erwin Diener (immunology) and Keith Maxwell (historical subjects) who have accumulated a body of knowledge they are willing to share with the community. Many more have pursued an interest or hobby to the level of professionalism such as Russ Tkachuk with “Birding Hotspots” or Jack Pope with “iPhone Photography.” Other courses like “Artists in the Studio” (facilitated initially by Ed Hill) and “Law for Seniors” (featuring three or four legal professionals recruited from the community) depend on the inspiration of the facilitators to organize the course presentations. This interesting mix of people willing to teach and an audience eager to learn has produced a Sunshine Coast institution that even in the face of a global pandemic survives and grows.

History of the Board and Program Committee

Judy Spears was the first Board Chair in 2001 when the Board was responsible for programming as well as executive duties. By 2006/07 when Anne Carr chaired the Board, both a communications and a program committee worked together with the Board to develop course content, recruit volunteer instructors and market the program. In 2008 under Lyle Wharton as Chair, the Board created two separate entities: a new Program Committee which solicited instructors for courses while the Executive Board conducted administrative work. Wharton’s hope was to gain more financial control for the EC Board, since it had to make the policy and financial decisions for ElderCollege yet the tuition fees were collected and administered by CapU, North Vancouver, with scant communication between the two.

Keith Maxwell, Board Chair from 2015 to 2017, and Thomas Kern, Chair from 2017 to 2019, were also dissatisfied with the financial limitations of the arrangement with CapU, North Vancouver. In particular, Maxwell expressed concern about CapU’s successive increases to course fees with no concomitant increase in service to ElderCollege. Looking back, Ann Hopkins, Chair from 2019 to 2021, pointed out that the CapU registration system was a cumbersome legacy technology more suited to mainstream university students than to an ElderCollege program. Meanwhile, ElderCollege enrolments fell as the fees climbed.

“We needed to make sure the program survived,” says Thomas Kern, and that will-to-survive led to significant change. First, under Keith Maxwell with the assistance of Thomas Kern and long-serving Board member, Bill Climie, ElderCollege became a non-profit society; then, the Board negotiated with the Sunshine Coast Regional District to service the registration for ElderCollege charging a nominal per-student fee. As well, EC courses were advertised in the bi-annual Recreation Guide.

That relationship worked well for four years, until COVID-19 shut down SCRDR recreation activities. As a result of the shut down and uncertainty about going forward, Sunshine Coast ElderCollege decided to take action; they created an online registration system which they manage in-house. One side benefit has been the lowering of tuition fees since total revenues do not rise to the threshold requiring payment of Provincial Sales Tax. Also, the Board itself assumed responsibility for advertising and promotion of SCEC courses. Financial autonomy and accountability had finally arrived.

Currently, ElderCollege has more than 1,000 people on its mailing list, produces a monthly online newsletter, and maintains an informative website. While the initial Mission Statement and Manual spearheaded by Judy Spears in 2001 has been lost, an up-dated Manual was created by members of the Board in 2020 and is posted on the SCEC website.

On-Going SCEC Public Programs and Special Events

As part of its community service over the years, the SCEC has sponsored public lectures open to everyone.

At one of these lectures, “Response to Paris” in January 2016, Dr. Jim Pawley outlined the conclusions reached and challenges set by the Paris Agreement on climate mitigation. The full house at Chatelec auditorium learned details about this complex agreement and how it would impact all of us, an agreement that had only been signed one month earlier.

In 2019, ElderCollege collaborated with Sunshine Coast Community Forest and the SCRDR in a presentation called “Wildfire on Your Doorstep” which analyzed the reasons for and emergency preparedness in the face of BC’s massive forest fires of recent years. The event was recorded by Coast Cable and presented at four other community events from Gibsons to Pender Harbour. As well, a three-part program explaining the work of the Administrative departments of the District of Sechelt enlightened public audiences in 2019 (How Does the District of Sechelt Really Work?). Meanwhile, the Clifford Smith Memorial Lecture has been an annual public highlight, featuring local and widely known speakers from across the province talking on relevant topics. (See Appendix Four for a complete list.)

Clifford Smith Memorial Lectures: 2007-2020

Clifford Smith was an ElderCollege board member and served as Chair two years before his untimely death in 2006. Smith is remembered as an imaginative and energetic Chair and to honour him the Board created an annual lecture showcasing interesting speakers from both on and off the Coast. Smith and his wife Linda had taught Shakespeare courses for ElderCollege and, fittingly, the board invited Christopher Gaze, actor and artistic director of Bard on the Beach, for the first lecture.

Gaze was followed in subsequent years by a variety of speakers: broadcasters Mark Forsyth, Bill Good Junior, Shelagh Rogers, and Fin Anthony (Thanks for Listening). Other highlights included former Attorney-General Wally Oppal (Is Our Criminal Justice System Too Soft?), former Lieutenant Governor of BC Steven Point (The Literacy Campaign) and educator Mike McKay (When Will What We Know Change the Way We Educate Our Children?). Local luminaries have included Shishálh Nation Elder, Sxixaxay, Theresa Jeffries, Doctor Eric Paetkau (Tales from the Doc's Side), Doctor Rand Rudland (Lens on the Wild), and Doctor Michael Klein (Challenging the Medical System: The Career of a Dissident Doctor). The 2020 lecture was given by Doctor Erwin Diener, internationally recognized immunologist, a particularly appropriate choice in the year of COVID-19. Doctor Diener delivered "The Immune System: Its Protective and Destructive Nature" online via Zoom, for the first time, to 246 registrants.

Award to Tony Greenfield

Recipient of the Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers 2018, Tony Greenfield

In January 2018, a long-time instructor for the Sunshine Coast ElderCollege was awarded the Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers on the nomination of the Sunshine Coast ElderCollege Board of Directors. Tony Greenfield, known as "Mr. Birding" in the community, helped teach the "Spring Birding" course for thirteen years. Tony is also the long-term President of the Sunshine Coast Natural History Society, a founding member of the B.C. Field Ornithologists, and has served as a director of the Sunshine Coast Community Forest and president of the Society for the Protection of Sargeant Bay. Recognition of his valued and extensive volunteer work in the community was richly deserved.

Award to Laurean Reid

Recipient of the Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers 2019, Laurean Reid

Laurean Reid, long-time volunteer and Chair of the Program Committee at ElderCollege, was a 2019 recipient of the Sovereign's Medal for Volunteers, for which award she was nominated by ElderCollege and Sunshine Coast Association for Community Living. The Sovereign's Medal was presented at a special reception hosted by ElderCollege with the venue at the Seaside Centre donated by the District of Sechelt. Standing in for the Governor General of Canada, Sechelt Mayor Darnel-da Siegers performed the honours in front of many family members and community friends. Dignitaries present from up and down the coast included Gibsons Mayor Bill Beamish, MP Patrick Weiler, SCR D Chair Lori Pratt, and RCMP Staff Sergeant Poppy Hallam. Champagne, tasty finger-food and a marvellous cake enlivened the event, a very special one for ElderCollege.

To mark the end of a successful term and to thank the facilitators, instructors and sponsors such as the Sunshine Coast Credit Union for their generous contributions to the success of ElderCollege, the Boards have hosted Appreciation events at which smoked salmon, sushi and champagne were laid on, and program contributors got to socialize with each other and with Board members, sometimes meeting for the first time. In-person gatherings such as these, however, were suspended for the time being given the restrictions of the 2020 Covid-19 pandemic.

The Challenge of COVID-19

While small crises inevitably arise, and while instructors, facilitators and course topics come and go, the passion of its volunteers keeps the SCEC program a going concern much appreciated by the thousands of third-age students who have passed through the doors of the classrooms annually and who are now attending online. A debt of gratitude is owed Capilano University who have provided significant space, technology and expertise beginning in 2000. The SCR D supplied invaluable advertising and registration services for some crucial years. Sunshine Coast Credit Union, as well, has been a faithful ongoing supporter of SCEC over the years. It should be noted, however, that currently SC ElderCollege is entirely self-supporting from the tuition fees it charges for courses.

The advent of COVID-19 in January of 2020 meant that public gatherings in enclosed spaces were no longer possible and the second half of the Spring program had to be cancelled. Over the summer the Executive Board waited on decisions from CapU and the SCR D Recreation program about going forward in the face of a potentially deadly communicable disease. Threatened with an indefinite period of shutdown, ElderCollege took up the challenge. Rather than remain subject to these outside forces, ElderCollege became proactive, designed an online delivery system for classes, plus a self-operated registration system, and mounted a Fall 2020 program of courses. ElderCollege offered free training in using Zoom which meant that a somewhat reluctant older generation managed to join and enjoy a slate of 11 courses over the term. In fact, 90 per cent of surveyed respondents said that Zoom was adequate or good. The EC cohort appears to have made the transition to online programming which will be a factor in future planning.

Thanks to Thomas Kern, Keith Maxwell and Michael Bradley, the technological challenges of shifting from in-person to online programming did not prevent fulfillment of our mission. Zoom may have diminished somewhat the personal contact in the online experience but the appetite for learning in the 55-plus cohort remains avid. Zoom has meant that for some courses (lecture format, for example) class size exceeds previous limits so enrolment can expand. As well, students with physical limitations are now able to attend online where previously they were restricted from joining in-person. Resilient in the face of changes which have shut down less flexible institutions, SC ElderCollege has met the challenge of the pandemic and expects to be a vital force for third-age education for the next twenty years, and beyond.
